About the conference

The annual Postgraduate Research Showcase conference taking place online, brings together and recognises the excellence of Lincoln's postgraduate research. For postgraduate researchers, this is an opportunity to hone your presentation and public engagement skills, showcase your research, explore new connections with the wider University community, and potentially win a prize.

Your research has the potential to have a huge impact, and the Research Showcase gives you the opportunity to share what you do with the world.

Entering the showcase will give you the chance to:

- gain confidence in communicating your research
- develop effective communication and presentation skills
- network with other researchers and build your profile

The showcase provides an ideal development opportunity for new and existing researchers from all disciplines to present their research, discuss and share good practice with others in a comfortable and supportive environment.
